Dimitrios Bachadakis was born on 26.04.1974 in Lauf an der Pegnitz, Germany. He grew up and studied business administration in Nuremberg at Friedrich-Alexander University. Dimitrios joined the exclusive “Siemens Trainee Program” for young graduates. During this period he had the chance to work in Singapore, Hong Kong and Orlando on several projects. In 2004, together with Yao Wen he co-founded CIP as a management buy-out from Siemens AG. In the following years as CEO, Dimitrios developed CIP to a Group of Companies through the Holding Company, CIP Holding AG in which Dimitrios and Yao are sole shareholders.

In the past decades, Dimitrios laid the foundation for new business models and scaling them up into large revenue companies. To grow international Joint-Venture Partnerships and for the execution of businesses, he places great importance on a strategic management approach, paired with the operational expertise of the teams. All on the basis of strong, international valued relationships and networks within the economic centers of Asia and Europe.
